Report

This assignment seemed doable at first. But there were small minor issues that caused it to take a lot longer to implement the lab in PHP and also how to run the files on AMPPS. Another issue I encountered was learning which IDE was best to learn PHP on. Overall it took about two weeks to figure out the lab. Some of the problems I encountered in this lab were that in translating the lab things were not always done exactly the same line by line. The biggest issue for my lab was the spacing that occurred while tokenizing. This assignment was effective in challenging me to use and learn PHP. What I enjoyed most and for the most interesting was translating from one language such as Java to another language in PHP. I had no experience in that and it was interesting to see how one method in Java can be done in another language. For a similar assignment in this course, I would suggest this assignment again because I think it would be a good experience to have.
